Adobe Photoshop is an industry-standard software that allows users to edit raster images such as photos, illustrations, and documents using a layer-based editing system. This tutorial will walk you through the basic tools that you'll need to edit an image in Photoshop, such as editing the color and applying different filters. How to install Photoshop on your PC If you're not sure about using a program like Photoshop, you can start with a free trial version of Photoshop. Photoshop Express is a popular app that you can download to your Android or iPhone device and it includes the full features of Photoshop. There are also many tutorials available online for all levels of Photoshop users.

Adobe Photoshop Tutorial: Build a Digital Photo in Photoshop

Step 1. Open an Image in Photoshop and Import a Background Open the image you wish to edit in Photoshop, and import a background. You can open Photoshop using the command line on Windows machines, or the Dock on macOS, and open it by using the command "photoshop.exe." It's best to include an image with the background in order to see what the changes are going to look like, so you can compare it to the final product. Here is a sample image I used for the tutorial. In this tutorial I'm going to build a picture of a beach, so I downloaded a picture I found on Google which I then cropped it slightly and included an ocean as a background. You'll need to make sure to get a background image that includes your image and isn't entirely white.

Step 2. Zoom into the Photo and Edit with the Brush Tool Using the brush tool, zoom in on the photo to make sure you can see the entirety of it before editing. You can use the Zoom function or the Command +, function on the keyboard to make the image visible for editing. Also, use the Pencil Tool to make any fine adjustments.

Step 3. Select the Layer Palette and Create a New Layer The Layer palette will open once the image is zoomed in. Click the New Layer icon in the tool bar to bring up the layer palette. Draw a selection around the entirety of the image, using the Pencil Tool. By default the layer palette will be gray, so you'll need to make it white by selecting the Visible option from the layers palette menu. Leave the layer selected and also select the Paint Bucket Tool (I) in the menu

A trio of former Army intelligence operatives has brought a suit against the FBI, alleging that their government-issued polygraph machines were rigged against them. The ex-gung-ho, no-nonsense FBI has long accepted polygraph examinations as a crucial part of the investigation and interrogation process. But the suit from Jesselyn Radack, Shamai Leibowitz and Robyn Gritz — who claim they were forced to answer “incriminating” questions after flunking their Lie Detection Tech exams — charges that the government systematically deceived and misled them into believing the tests would be accurate. The lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., names the FBI, the Defense Department and the Central Intelligence Agency as defendants. Missile defense is one of our National Security interests, the last thing we need are three former intel operatives suing the US Government alleging their government polygraph test were rigged.

Q: Php: implement GET / POST in a good way? I am building a web application with php. I am facing a problem when I try to implement get and post, my application is based on OOP. So I have trouble doing that. The first thing I thought is to put input element to all the Form and use it as object. But I read something about sessions and it says session object will pass by post. So I am puzzled about it and really need some advice/suggestions! Thanks very much!

A: Couple of ways to go: Use getters/setters/accessors

Method 1 - when setting a value of a variable in a class:

public class Foo {
    public function setBar($val){
        $this->bar = $val;
    public function doGet($request){ $obj = new foo();
        echo $request->get('bar');
    }
}
```

Method 2 - when getting a value from a variable in a class:

class Foo {
    public function getBar(){
        $val = $_GET['bar'];
        // If you are using querystring, use $request->get('bar');
        return $val;
    }
$foo = new
