core technical support ended on december 28, 2009. [1] on december 15, 2012, activation servers for adobe creative suite 2 applications were shut down, which also affected the windows version of acrobat 7. [2] registered users who wished to continue using acrobat 7 after that date could download a new installer from adobe with a new serial number that could be activated without contacting a server. [3] some users and websites had interpreted that adobe was giving cs2 applications away for free, but adobe clarified that these were only for registered users and required a valid existing serial number to access downloads. [4] [5] in may 2019, adobe stopped providing the downloads entirely. Adobe Acrobat 7.0 Professional Free Download Full Version adobe now owns the name acrobat and has continued to make related products. it was a strong contender to macromedia flash and microsoft silverlight. but it never gained traction against them, and then adobe discontinued it in june 2015. acrobat: acrobat was the flagship product of adobe's family of pdf-creation and viewing products. in 2015, the acrobat line was rebranded as adobe experience manager (aem) in order to unify the company's web-publishing and content management offerings. acrobat was created by ivan herman, part of the team that created adobe postscript, but he left adobe when it split postscript from pdf in 1995, and went on to found aldus, an early competitor to adobe. acrobat reader: acrobat reader for windows was the free, generic name for pdf readers, the most common name for software that can read and display pdf files. in 2016, adobe released a new version of acrobat reader for free under the name adobe reader dc, which is a cross-platform, cloud-enabled pdf reader. [7] acrobat connect: this was the former acrobat connect service. in 2011, it was replaced by adobe's digital publishing suite (dps) service, which offers similar functionality. in 2016, this was renamed adobe dps. [8] adobe flash professional: adobe flash professional was adobe's product for making vector graphics for websites. adobe bought macromedia in 2005, but then in 2006, adobe spun it off as a separate product, and renamed it to flash professional. 5ec8ef588b
