With the release of the 2014 version of Photoshop September 17th, Adobe has really played up all its marketing strategies and is hoping for something big out of the year. If 2009 was the year we were rendered obsolete, 2014 might just be the year we all lose our jobs. Ha! That too had been said in 2006 too. On Photoshop, the biggest news this release cycle is the addition of dozens of new creative and multi-platform features, while also delivering continued speed and stability for existing Photoshop users. The "Creative Cloud" versions of Adobe's creative software, Photoshop and Creative Cloud Photography, bridge the gap between PPro and Elements. Photoshop and Photoshop Extended users will be especially excited by the new changes. The feature set is comprised of new Photo Merge, Focus Merge, Vectorize, Video assist and motion tool features, as well as expanded 5D printing and motion graphics editing capabilities. New ways to work online in collaboration with Creative Cloud Sync users are even better with the speed and stability of Photoshop. Online Data Management: During release events, Adobe showed off its new Linked Data System (LDS), which enables users to connect their Photoshop files to one another online to freely transfer and share their work in near real time. Selection Improvements/A New Selection Tools: Photoshop now has an even more robust selection process, including a new Single-Command mode and the ability to build selections while selections are active. Photoshop also now has a new, more precise method to remove elements, with the new Delete and Fill tool (beta), which requires just one action.
