If you are looking to purchase Adobe Photoshop, then it is important that you are aware of the different pricing models. If you want a full version of the software, you need to pay for it. Once the license key is imported, you can use the full version of the software on your computer.

I like the new workflow with the new task bar, its so much easier. However, its not connecting to my iCloud, its just not working. I've been trying to get it to work everytime I update my iOS. I totally get that its a work around, but I would like to use iCloud on my work itunes workflows. I've seen posts online from people who have it working, and I've asked my friend who's pretty tech savvy about it, and he said nothing he's tried will ever work. I know the adobe team is overloaded trying to fix it, but does anyone know how to get it to work? Are you updating from an earlier version of Photoshop and if so how to keep the existing workspace and collections? Also which version of PS is installed and where are the settings stored? Thanks for the site in this regard. In my previous review, I was thrilled with the update to the new tab bar in PS 5. The only minor issue I had was that the new tabs seemed to minimize their windows first, and then the window itself minimized. This meant the tab itself and the window were missing from the taskbar. After a quick fix by adding the missing taskbar items manually, the tabs showed up again. Sadly, this fixed the initial problem. However judging from the changes in the new version, this might be a feature that doesn't yet work well. The new version does't allow the resize of tabs at all, and I've played with it a bit, and I can't resize them to fit the window. This was good enough for me to update, and I'm happy with the update, but it must be made work better. I'm keeping track of this issue for when I eventually move to CS6. I'd suggest to make an issue in Adobe's bugzilla for this smaller issue.
